This is the first time that the association has awarded this prize. It is recognition of the path of youth, said the 27-year-old Colombian psychologist, who received the award at the ninth annual meeting, held by the Institute of Psychological Studies of the Austral University of Chile, in Valdivia.A graduate of San Buenaventura University in Cali, Millan was honored for an article he wrote that will be published in the influential American journal History of Psychology. Aish Feed

My thesis is a work in the field of the history of psychology and an analysis of the impact of Wilhelm Mann's research, one of the pioneers of experimental and educational psychology in Chile," said the professional, who moved to Talca two years ago. To do graduate The director of the student dissertation and co-author of the work, doctor of education Gonzalo Salas, said: "The magazine has good visibility and is considered a reference for intellectuals related to the field of history of psychology". to save raed Milan's research focuses on the experiences of German Wilhelm Mann in Chilean schools and makes up a number unknown to most people. "Wilhelm Mann did some experiments with high school students and published these results in eight parts in German. He saved this lost work and showed his influence in Germany; how Germans read his work, how they cited it and how they thought about it," he said. the doctoral student stated.